As they were placed last year, it was difficult for even a middle-sized man to see them; and all the poor children could get a glimpse of was a spatkling splutter, interpoled by the heads and bodies of the multitudes between them and the burning wheels and diamonds. Pray tell the City Father's to have the fire-works placed five or six feet higher. The Bond alluded to, with some others, was hypothecated by a note broker of this city to an eminent and affluent merchant for a loan of money. The loan being due and a balance of it unpaid, the note broker authorized a sale of the Bond. It was accordingly sold at the Board of Brokers by Saruel Gorgas, Jr. Esq. the merchants' broker. Charles Macalester, Esq. became the purchaser. The latter gentleman transmitted the Bond to Pittsburg to have it transferred to his own name. On advice being received of the refusal to admit it to transat work in the quarry retired, and Boyer had got 3 or 4 Yards off when the explosion took place. gas the sum he had paid, whilst Mr. Gorgas was re-imbursed by his principal.

We also learn that the note broker was employed to negotiate the loan on these bonds by a gentleman who la engaged in the manufacture of iron at Brownsville, Pa. and in the sale of his manufactures at Pittsburg. The late Treasurer of the city of Pittsburg is, we believe, the dook keeper or agent of this gentleman. If interest has been duly paid on the Bond in question, it must have been provided by the late Treasurer, who can certainly explain the transaction. We have reason to believe that a loan was made some time ago by one of our Banks to the Brownsville gentleman, on a larger amount of Pittsburg Bonds, which was paid at muturity.
